Daniel,

You are becoming juvenile. If you choose to advise Ms. Margolin to publish to the world this story, yes, I am advising you not to do that. It could impact all of her current relationships, personal and business, and she might never escape it once it is published.

Whoever advised her to start on this journey is an arrogant, ignorant fool. My guess is that it was someone else, not you. I think you have been asked by that fool to be aggressive, and you are trying to do what that person thinks he or she wants you to do. Ask johnny depp what the risks are.

From my perspective, I don't wish to see a 19 year old trash herself in the public eye. Unlike many attorneys I try to solve problems and help the parties involved find the best solution. I have never found it beneficial to try to get an outcome that is more fair for one party than the other. That merely adds to the friction, aggravation and legal costs, assuming both sides have competent counsel.

But if Ms. Margolin thinks this is how her conduct on Thanksgiving should be examined and broadcast, I cannot stop her. No matter what the outcome might be in court, she will be hung out to dry in the court of public opinion. I will, of course, leave it to you to give her your opinion as to whether my warning should be needed.
